REB Storage Systems International

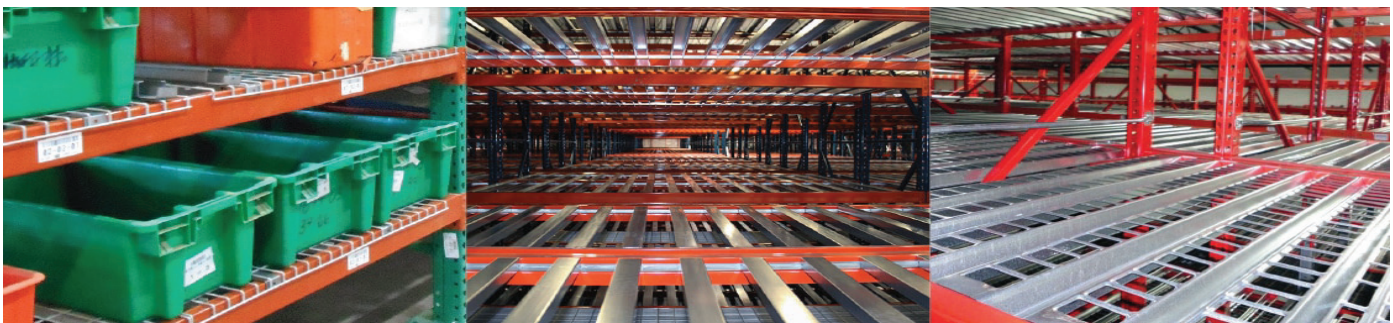

Decking is a vital component to your storage system. Choosing the right decking will help ensure your products don't get damaged and operations run smoothly.

REB Storage Systems International offers decking solutions for a variety of applications including shelving, racking, mezzanines, and catwalks. REB can even supply you with custom decking for specialty projects upon request.

Complete Rack System Products and Services

REB Storage Systems International can provide you with products to complete your material handling system, including decking, shelving, and mezzanines.

At REB Storage Systems International, we combine our superior selection of quality products with professional, first-rate service. We will gladly assist you with selecting the right options for your particular needs and can provide additional support to help you complete your project. From rack system engineering to rack installation, we can help with all of the needs of your material handling operations.

Why REB?

At REB Storage Systems International we work with many manufacturers, this gives us the flexibility to choose suppliers based on the demands of your project including pricing and lead time. This combined with our in-house engineering and project management expertise allows us to provide you with your specific storage solution. Not many companies have this capability.

Our project management and engineering services include design and layout, managing subcontractors, shipping co-ordination, installation and permitting support. As systems integrators, we can also recommend ideal material handling products that will help your operation run more efficiently.

We'd appreciate the opportunity to help you further, whether that be more information or a quote.
